

Secular theories separate the dinosaurs over millions of years of continental drift...

Christians may attribute the loss of the dinosaurs to loss of sustainable climate after the flood is based on the idea of an "ice/vapor-canopy" greenhouse collapse.

The idea that the initial break-up of the continents also occurred at the flood is substantiated by patterns of matching fossils found on adjacent continents across the ocean from one another, including polar zones – indicating not only common landmass, but also common temperate zone.